

Dr. Vladimir Milivojevic is a Clinical Assistant at the Department of Internal Medicine, Faculty of Medicine, University of Belgrade, with subspecialization in the field of gastroenterology and hepatology. His scientific research includes Helicobacter pylori infection, microbiota, nutrition and new endoscopy procedures and techniques. He has published 36 manuscripts in Journals from the SCI list, more than 80 abstracts, has over 480 citations and the value of h index is 9 (Google Scholar). Dr. Milivojevic has given lectures in several national and international conferences. He is a reviewer of several international/national scientific journals. He is the founder and president of the Section for Nutrition, Microbiota and Immunometabolism (part of the Serbian Medical Association). He is a member of European Association for Clinical Nutrition and Metabolism (ESPEN), European Society of Gastrointestinal Endoscopy (ESGE), European Gastroenterology Association (UEG) and European Association of Gastroenterology, Endoscopy and Nutrition (EAGEN).

Lecture: Nutrition and gut microbiota, different gut axes